CONCORD RESERVE

“ Finding a senior life plan community that has everything you want can be tricky, but for one resident, Concord Reserve was calling to him.

“I was looking for a not-for-profit that was financially stable, close to family, and faith-based with a continuum of care,” Don recalled of his search. “I had toured a few different communities over the past years and wasn’t expecting anything to be perfect, but Concord Reserve stood out and has exceeded my expectations.”

With a background as an attorney and Methodist pastor, Don had witnessed dysfunction in organizations, but was pleased with what he saw here. “The board is truly proactive, facing whatever issues Concord Reserve may have,” he was pleased to share, highlighting the community’s upcoming expansion. “The administration has a measured, assertive approach to solving problems.”

“I like the way it’s things operate here and enjoy the people, residents, and staff alike,” he said. “The staff is incredibly kind; it seems to be a calling for them, which is always what I wanted to see in the church; it’s remarkable. The people are interesting, and we look out for each other. The not-for-profit and faith-based status positively impacts the culture.”

As a not-for-profit with a continuum of care, Concord Reserve ensures residents’ needs are addressed first, a top priority for Don. “I feel secure knowing that if my wife or I have problems we can’t handle, we’ll still be under the leadership and care of this organization. I am far more ...

When he's not spending time with family nearby, Don participates in the Resident Finance Work Group, supports the community's spiritual and not-for-profit initiatives, or attends The Slice of Life, a program for residents to share their stories.

“I enjoy the personal interaction between people, even more than the events,” he said, speaking highly of the people he's come to know during his time at Concord Reserve. “It's easy to make friends and have real connections here. There are lots of opportunities to do things within and outside the community.”

Concord Reserve is expanding Independent Lifestyle options and luxury amenities for active adults who are ready to trade daily upkeep for flexibility, friendships, and full calendars. With this exciting development underway, Don had one piece of advice: “Get on the waitlist, it's a super place and I'm glad I'm here!”

As a not-for-profit organization committed to providing all-inclusive services and programs for its residents, Concord Reserve is fortunate to have residents who answer the call of community and enjoy all it has to offer.
